Abstract

Method for managing a closing of an account of a user. The method includes receiving an identifier of the account of the user, retrieving status information associated with the 5 identifier and determining whether the account is coded to close from the retrieved status information. Thereafter, automatically providing from the retrieved status information a reason why the account has not been closed if the account is determined to be coded to close.